GUILFORD'S GAIN WILL BE A MILLION AND A HALF

According to Figures Obtained From Board Of Equalization In Session Yesterday--- Average Assessment Of Farm Lands $9.77 Per Acre.

The county board of equalization met yesterday for the purpose of considering the assessments by the township assessors and equalizing the assessments in order that all townships should share alike, according to the real value of their property.

While the figures for Morehead and Gilmer have not been compiled it is estimated that there will be a gain of something like $200,000 in the city as all the rural districts of the two townships have been compiled. The net gain in the remainder of the county was found to be $1,344,719, it being estimated that the entire gain for the county will be over $1,500,000. The gain was mostly in rural districts.

The board found that as a whole the assessments had been fair and conservative, though several small changes in half a dozen townships in order to put all townships on the same basis. They found that the work of the assessors had been conscientiously done and complimented them upon the unusually fair assessment. That the assessments were satisfactory was evidenced by the fact that not more than half a dozen complaints were heard before the board.

County Assessor R. W. Harrison, who is a member of the board of equalization, reported as to all the townships excepting Morehead and Gilmer. Mr. Harrison reported to the board the valuations of all farm lands in the county, the figures being based on the average price paid for land in each township during the past five years. In making his average of the assessment of land per acre of tracts of under five acres were eliminated and did not include town lots, manufacturing sites, etc. After raising the assessment in some townships and lowering it in two the board found that the average assessment of farm lands of more than 5 acres was $9.77 per acre. The average assessment was made by the township assessors follows:

Bruce	7.12
Clay	8.50
Center Grove	8.60
Deep River	8.10
Friendship	9.90
Fentress	9.80
Greene	5.00
Jefferson	7.20
Jamestown	11.20
Madison	8.50
Monroe	8.90
Oak Ridge	6.70
Rock Creek	8.40
Sumner	9.70
Washington	5.20
High Point	15.30
Gilmer	15.90
Morehead	19.18

After considering the assessments the board raised the assessment in Bruce from $7.12 to $7.83; in Greene from $5 to $6; in Jefferson from $7.20 to $7.92; in Oak Ridge from $6.70 to $8.04; in Washington from $5.20 to $5.72. The board lowered the assessment in Fentress from $9.80 to $9.31; in Sumner from $9.70 to $8.73.

The real and personal assessment for the county, Morehead and Gilmer townships excepted, being as follows, showing the gain by townships:

	1910	1911	Gain
Bruce	$180,239	$216,488	$36,209

Madison	168,745	264,125	95,380
Monroe	197,428	275,412	77,984
Oak Ridge	265,070	287,020	21,950
Rock Creek	467,518	528,102	60,584
Sumner	207,491	300,279	92,788
Washington	173,263	176,673	3,410
High Point	2,942,867	3,294,174	351,307

Morehead—Returns not fully tabulated. Regarding the above figures it should be stated that the changes made by the board in raising or lowering the assessment of farm lands affected the figures as follows: Bruce, 10 per cent. increase in assessment, making the total gain $50,209; Greene, raised 20 per cent., making the total gain $22,222; Jefferson, raised 10 per cent., making the total gain $43,604; Oak Ridge, raised 20 per cent., making a gain of $40,950; Washington, raised 10 per cent., making

FAULKNER HEARING NOT CONCLUDED

Commissioners Meet Again Tonight When It Is Believed Testimony Will Be Concluded—A. & M. College Books Showed Shortage Of $432.56.

The board investigating the charges preferred against H. H. Faulkner met in adjourned session at 8:30 o'clock last night. Commissioner Foushee was present for the first time, being detained on account of the illness and death of his mother-in-law, and Attorney Sapp at once wanted to go over all the testimony in order that Mr. Foushee might learn all the facts in the case. Commissioner Foushee at once stated that he was willing to withdraw and not have a vote in this matter. This was satisfactory to Mr. Sapp, but he stated that he would insist that the whole matter be gone over if Mr. Foushee was to vote in the matter.

Dr. J. E. Dellinger was put on the stand and his cross-examination continued lasting for over an hour.

A. T. Whitsett, secretary-treasurer of the A. & M. College, was put on the stand and certified to certain records from the college. He also related the circumstances leading to the dropping of Dr. Dellinger as physician at the A. & M. College.

President Dudley then took the stand and read from the minutes of the college showing the shortage of Faulkner as bursar of the college in 1897. From the books he showed that an expert accountant had been employed to audit the books and the report of the auditor showed that on May 1, 1897, Faulkner was short $432.46, this shortage having been made good by the time the auditor made his final report to the committee on August 12, 1897. At this meeting the finance committee recommended that Faulkner be retained as bursar until January 1, 1898, this being done.

The witness stated that he did not think Faulkner used the money with intent to defraud the institution and had asked that he be given a chance to make good. This he did. On cross-examination he admitted that he had given Faulkner a good recommendation when he left the institution and that at the time did not think he was dishonest. He still did not think he was dishonest.

While on the stand the witness asked to explain that he has been done an injustice in the report of the proceedings of the day previous, referring to The Telegram's report, in which the statement of Attorney Broadhurst regarding the records showing the accounts of Faulkner was mentioned. He reminded the board that just before adjournment on Thursday night after Faulkner had attacked his veracity he had requested that the records be produced in order to exonerate himself. On cross-examination he admitted that he had received a letter from the defense asking if the records could be produced at the hearing and had replied that they could not unless the chairman of the board of trustees was consulted about the matter.

After the cross-examination was concluded an adjournment was taken until tonight at 8 o'clock, at which time it is probable that Faulkner will again take the stand to tell what he did with the money in an attempt to account for the shortage at the time the accounts were audited.

PACKING LAWS TOO STRICT SAYS ARMOUR

Special to Telegram. New York, July 14.—American beef packers must go to Argentine Republic for their products said J. Armour today if they wish to retain their hold upon the exportation of beef. He said that conditions in this country were getting to be so stringent and that the laws as enforced by the government were becoming unbearable.

Special to Telegram. New York, July 14.—Mark Twain left actual property worth $471,136. The appraisal filed with the surrogate places this value on the securities and real estate the humorist bequeathed to his only surviving child, Mrs. Gabriellawitsch, when he died April 21, 1910.

Former Member of Parliament Photographed the Coronation

SIR BENJAMIN STONE made the only pictures of the coronation of King George and Queen Mary that were made. This was due to direct orders of King George, and the unusual honor was bestowed on Sir Benjamin because of his previous excellent work on historic occasions. Sir Benjamin is the president of the National Photographic Record Association of Great Britain, and he has a large collection of photographs illustrating historic events as well as local observances and customs. The pictures he made of the recent coronation will be preserved in the British museum. Though making the pictures for the British government, Sir Benjamin was instructed to give the newspapers all the prints they wanted at a nominal price. This arrangement was made so that there would be no grumbling because private photographers were not allowed to take pictures during the ceremony. Had photographers been admitted without restrictions there would have been little room for any one else. Sir Benjamin's record insured that his work would be well done. He has long been prominent in photography and was also for many years a member of parliament, representing East Birmingham.

TAFT

Witnesses Spectacular Aerial Stunts by Atwood Near White House.

Special to Telegram. Washington, July 14.—Harry N. Atwood this afternoon performed the most brilliant feat of his career by landing in the grounds adjacent to the White House, a feat of skill and daring. During his flight he could not have made a more successful journey than he did to the White House. After landing President Taft presented Atwood with a medal. He came into College Park about 12 o'clock and lunched and later was received by the President. He then resumed his flight in his airplane, doing a number of stunts around the monument, the president being an interested spectator. He left for New York in response to a telegram.

WAR

Between French And Spanish Forces in Morocco Seems Imminent.

Special to Telegram. Tangier, Morocco, July 14.—The storm center in the Morocco crisis has been shifted to the Moroccan town of Elkear, where, separated by a narrow river, forces of French and Spanish troops are blowing up each others positions. They are on the verge of an open clash. The Spanish troops are determined to fight if the French attempt to cross the stream. The Spanish military activity is viewed as a menacing factor in the general situation.

FREIGHT TRAINS ARE WRECKED IN RALEIGH

Special to Telegram. Raleigh, July 14.—An extra freight train with engine No. 862 running from Greensboro to Selma, collided this morning in the Southern yards here with engine No. 482 near Boylan bridge and the Union Station switch. The freight train brakes failed to work properly and the engines came together and passed into a siding and on to the turntable and then the No. 482 was pushed off the turntable and into a deep pit just beyond. This engine was completely wrecked. The freight engine was right badly injured and the tangled freight cars blocked the main lines of both the Southern and Seaboard for a little while. A wreck train was ordered to come from Greensboro there being none here heavy enough to do the work. The engineer on No. 482 was J. P. Cournow, of Greensboro, and the engineer on 862 was F. W. Burrows, also of Greensboro. No one was injured in the wreck.

ILLINOIS POLITICS ARE REVIEWED BY GOVERNOR DENEEN

Chief Executive Was Cross Examined by Defense in The Lorimer Hearing Yesterday.

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 14.—With an extended review of political fortunes in Illinois the cross-examination of Gov. Deneen as a witness before the Senate Lorimer committee began today. Counsel for Lorimer asked the witness a number of questions to show that Deneen and his friends controlled the powers in Illinois rather than Lorimer and his friends.

An attempt was made to make Deneen testify that Lorimer was responsible for the upheaval in politics, but the governor was unwilling to give him all the credit. They then tried to show that Deneen was responsible for the law while Lorimer obeyed them. The witness denied these allegations.

He also stated that he had not been in any communication with former Senator Aldrich concerning the Lorimer case. He admitted, however, that he had talked the case over with President Taft, but declined to give the substance of the conversation unless the President was called as a witness. He was asked whether he was willing to stake his reputation that there had not been a jackpot in the legislature in Illinois to elect Lorimer and he said that he would.

SHOOTING SCRAPE IN DUPLIN EARLY LAST EVENING

The periodical negro shooting scrape was pulled off last night at 9 o'clock with Charlie Shaw acting the part of the hero and martyr in the scene. He was shot suddenly from behind and a bullet lodged in both the right and left hips. The assailant escaped and nothing was heard at a late hour from the fugitive though several policemen were sent to work on the case.

Shaw was sitting quietly on the porch of a negro named Dora Trolinger, at 115 Clinton street, where the high society of the colored district was budding forth in a festival of some description. The progress of the party was stopped effectively and all the denizens quickly dispersed when an unknown negro stepped around the corner of the porch and shot at Charlie. The bullet took effect and the negro turned to run into the house when the second missile floored him. Drs. Wilson and Moore dressed the wounds, finding that one bullet was still lodged in the hip but the other had cut a clean path through the leg. Shaw is seriously wounded but will recover.

The mysterious part of the affair appears in the perfect vanishing stunt that was pulled off by the man who inflicted the wounds. Charlie declares that he does not know by whom he was shot and no one else about the place can throw any light on the affair. It is thought by the police, however, that the victim could but will not disclose the identity of the assailant. The probability is that a woman is at the bottom of the affair, as this is usually the cause of the attempted murders, and Shaw prefers to bear a little suffering than to reveal the whole affair.

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 14.—This is the program for the windup of Congress agreed upon today by leaders of the various factions in the Senate: Vote on reciprocity bill July 22, wool tariff schedule July 27, free list bill August 1 and the congressional reapportionment bill August 3, statehood for Arizona and New Mexico August 7, adjournment of Congress immediately afterwards.

The agreement was formally offered without opposition, all factions being satisfied with the arrangement. It is expected that Congress will adjourn within a few days after August 7. All these bills have been passed by the House. If they cannot be passed as passed by the Senate they will go to conference.

The agreement was formally offered in the Senate by Republican Leader Penrose. Senator Martin, the Democratic leader, said the Democrats favored the agreement because of a desire throughout the country to see the present session terminated.

Novel Case in Raleigh Court.

Special to Telegram. Raleigh, July 14.—A novel case in the police court today against W. A. Myatt, prominent merchant, on the charge of keeping hogs in the city. Mr. Myatt explained that he had purchased the pigs for barbecue purposes and had them in the city only a few days, having already sent them to the country to be converted into barbecue. Justice Harris dismissed the case.

Special to Telegram. San Francisco, July 14.—The trial of John and James McNamara, indicted on a charge of murder in connection with the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building, was set for October 10. STAY IN THE COUNTRY.

The "back to the farm movement" is all right and will benefit the country and the towns and cities, provided the people who return to the country belong to the class which has been successful in the cities and towns. People who are failures in the country will generally prove to be failures in the city, and if they are failures in both places the country is in better condition without them. It is all right for people who can succeed as farmers to return to the country; but the best plan to help develop the country and build it up and increase its prosperity is to train the boys and girls of the country to remain on the farms and to succeed there and make life pleasant and profitable, from the standpoint of character building and worldly prosperity.

Some people will attain a measure of success in the country, will be able to make a living and to live happily, who would prove utter failures in the city and gain nothing but poverty and misery by attempting to live there. Therefore, country people should be slow to leave the farms. There is no better place in the world for a countryman than on the farm and but few places where he can live so well and be as happy. Country life is improving. Country people now have many of the advantages and pleasures afforded by life in the towns and cities, without the disadvantages and troubles incident to urban life. They should be slow to exchange what they have for the uncertainties of life away from the farm.

So far as the country has been able to observe the hot weather and the warm times in the Senate both failed to injure the reciprocity measure.

The Sun advocates a flyless Baltimore—not an aviatorless Baltimore, but one in which the house flies will not care to spend their days.

"Keep cool and eat pte." is the advice of the Baltimore Sun. Presumably it is intended for general application and not specifically for the politicians.

Hoke Smith has been elected to two offices down in Georgia. He would probably be given others except for the fact that the others are too small to fit Hoke.

Senator Lorimer's private life is said to be above reproach. Perhaps if he retired to private life again Lorimer could repeat the experience of living a blameless life.

Most of the South Carolina newspapers favor T. B. Felder for Governor of Georgia. Doubtless they would favor him for Governor of South Carolina if he was a citizen of that State.

The Greenville Piedmont is authority for the statement that "Near beer does not even cool." Then why drink near beer? The genuine can generally be found in the vicinity of places where the near brand is dispensed.

Columbia State paragrapher wants to know who cares if Castro has landed in Venezuela. This is a matter of absorbing interest to the paragraphists and we are surprised to find one of them asking for information.

Perhaps those electric fans were placed in the Senate chamber because the most hot air circulates there. Anyway, no fans have been installed in the House, where there has been more work and less talk, during the extra session, at least.

Senators Thornton of Louisiana, Bailey of Texas, and Simmons of North Carolina, are the three Democrats who oppose the reciprocity bill. After the next election it is quite probable that it will be in order for each of them to ask, "When shall we three meet again?"

Dr. Wiley predicts that smoking and chewing tobacco will become obsolete within fifteen years. If the doctor's prediction proves correct the tobacco trust will have to quit business in another decade and a half. Perhaps the government will wait to verify Dr. Wiley's prediction before proceeding to dissolve the trust.

Speaking of coming back—there is Hoke Smith. He was defeated for Governor of Georgia and proceeded to come back and take that office and the United States Senatorship. All the gentlemen who are down and out should seek interviews with Governor and Senator Smith and learn the secret of coming back in the most approved fashion.

The Greenville Piedmont expresses the opinion that the editor of The Telegram does not know how to play marbles. The fact is that the editor of The Telegram does not claim to be an expert at playing marbles, which is probably due to the fact that he has never lived in a town where the people had as much time to devote to this fascinating game as they have in Greenville.

The Louisville Courier-Journal, whose chief concern is about something to drink, thinks that the increase of corn production in the Carolinas should reduce the arid intervals when the Governors of the two States meet in the future. The Courier-Journal has failed to note correctly the tendency of affairs in the Carolinas. The practice of eating the corn instead of drinking it is growing in favor in these States.

Without questioning Senator Simmons' honesty of convictions and purpose, it must be evident that if he is a protectionist he is misrepresenting, instead of representing, the Democrats of North Carolina. There may be a few men in this State claiming to be Democrats who believe in a high tariff, but the number is extremely small; and the real Democrats of North Carolina all stand for Democratic principles on the Democratic platform. The truth seems to be, however, that Senator Simmons' particular pet is the lumber interests and that he is mainly interested in protecting that industry, regardless of other industries and the welfare of the people at large.

W. L. Spoon of Forsyth county, highway engineer, directs the attention of the commissioners of that county to the fact that good roads are frequently in need of repairs. This fact is of great importance. Improved highways will wear out if neglected. To secure the greatest benefits from them and the longest service such roads must be properly repaired when repairs are needed. Some of the macadam roads in Guilford county are at present in need of repairs and unless they are given prompt attention and the necessary work is done the loss to the county is going to be large. A little money spent now on these roads and a little spent from time to time to keep them in good condition will preserve them and make them fit for service for many years. If they are allowed to wear out at the rate they are going at present they will be worthless in a few years.

Some Views of Gambling.

That card game over in the woods last Saturday evening will not be a lesson to the folks who play cards in the city. Many here claim that the greatest evil of this town is gambling. They tell that every Sunday the negroes and trashy white folks gather in the woods around town and play cards and drink all day Sunday. And when we have said that most everybody will approve and say the custom is a great evil and certainly should be stopped. But when we go further and say that the "best" people in town play cards for hours each week and have up a "pot" in the way of some kind of prize, a book or piece of needlework or painted china which to the so-called society "lady" is as much a "pot" to her and her friends as the cold cash is to the fellow in the woods; when we begin to talk that way we are decidedly going too far and treading on dangerous ground. But mark the prediction that the boys who are so unfortunate as to have mothers who spend so much time around the card table will be no better off in the game of life. The influence will be against them and ten to one—notice that remark, we are so accustomed to gambling that we all use the terms, at times, of the gambler. But let it go. Ten to one the boys who have mothers who play for prizes will themselves play for prizes, and, if the worst comes, then these same mothers will go into hysterics about the "dear" boy who learned the lesson from his mother.—Mt. Airy News.

The Crown Is His.

In spite of varied conditions and vast interests that have worked to belittle if not kill the influence of Mr. Bryan, every now and then the bare, honest judgment of the country is forced to give him first place. We may not agree with him on all of his policies, but as a thinker, as a man of convictions whose power for upholding them is as strong and as undefiled as his character, we are compelled to admit that he has no equal. He has remarkable tenacity for the things he believes in and even when the country comes to believe in the things for which he has been responsible, credit has been given those who have adopted his policies. This is manifestly unfair, or would be if it were lasting, but in time Mr. Bryan will come into his own. He may never be President but the American people will place a crown upon his head nevertheless. He has been a great statesman, a great reformer and many times he has had to tread the wine press alone. But he has been encouraged by the good will of the masses of the people for whom he has labored. Even the metropolitan papers whose ownership can be traced to those who had every reason to oppose the reforms advocated by Mr. Bryan, have lost their power. They not only realize that he has been right, but they know that at heart a majority of the people of the country believe in him. Everything that Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson and Harmon have said and done which has met with approval by the people had its origin with Mr. Bryan. Some day the consolidation of this sentiment will take place and the crown will rest upon the brow of the Nebraskan.—High Point Enterprise.

How City People Live.

People who live in the country and country towns, where there is plenty of room and abundant space between buildings, have much to be thankful for, especially amid such torrid temperature as has prevailed for some days recently. They read of intense heat, and prostrations and deaths occurring in the cities, but the news dispatches give only a slight idea of the intense suffering in the densely populated centers. While the temperature may really be no higher in the cities than in the country regions, the sun pouring down all day upon the compact stone and brick buildings makes them so hot that they are almost like ovens, and this heat is so retained that the buildings do not get cool during the night.

The writer has just had an opportunity during a forced stay of a few days in Baltimore of seeing how people suffer under such conditions. They exist through the day some how, and at night they almost live on the streets and in the parks. Along the residence section every house had a group of people with chairs and pillows on the sidewalks in front, and hundreds of men slept on benches and grass plots in the parks. Finding a place cool enough to sleep in was a problem with many of them.

In this, as in many other things, the people of the country are far more blessed than the people of the city.—Greenville Reflector.

"Tied to The Interests."

It looks like Senator Simmons is tied to "the interests." His votes on several occasions have given his enemies a heavy cudgel. Mr. Simmons tried to saddle his mistake on the lumber schedule on Chairman Eller, but Mr. Eller refuses to be a scape goat. Of course Mr. Simmons will have friends who will stick to him whatever he does, but if he holds his place in the face of his votes in the Senate for the past year, there will be at least one surprised man in the State.—Thomasville Davidsonian.

MRS. SHONTS IS PENNILESS IN PARIS

Special to Telegram.
Paris, July 13.—Mrs. Theodore Shonts mother of a duchess and wife of an American millionaire, finds herself in Paris unable to leave her apartments which she was to have vacated Saturday on account of not having money to pay the usual charge made when a tenant quits.

When a bill for 400 pounds was presented to her by her landlord Mrs. Shonts was not able to pay the account. Her lawyer advanced her the money and she gave him a draft which up to this time has been refused. All cables to her husband for money have been refused. Mr. Shonts says that he is not obliged to support the duchess and says that if Mrs. Shonts does not hurry back to America or does not indicate that she will return soon he will not pay any of her bills. This story has given further rise to the report that Mrs. Shonts will seek a divorce upon arriving in America.

SEA ISLAND COTTON CULTURE CONFINED TO FORTY-THREE COUNTIES

Facts About The Growing of Sea Island And Long Staple Cotton in This Country--Growing Egyptian Cotton in Arizona And California.

Washington, July 14.—The cultivation of sea island cotton in the United States at the present time, as shown by the returns of ginneries given in the recent census bureau report on cotton production for 1910, is confined to 43 counties, distributed as follows: Fourteen in Florida, 25 in Georgia, and four in South Carolina, but it is not grown in all parts of the counties from which it is returned. Attempts made in many other parts of these and other States to grow this cotton have produced such unsatisfactory results that all efforts to grow it outside of certain well-defined areas in the States named have been abandoned.

Sea Island.

The finest sea island cotton is grown on the islands off the coast of South Carolina by planters who have for many years paid the most careful attention to seed selection. The fibre produced is long and fine, and is harvested and handled with such care that the grower's private brand is frequently accepted by buyers as a guarantee of the quality. These fine "crop lots," all of the finest of which are exported, comprise about one-third of the sea island cotton marketed at Charleston, and sell for from 30 to 75 cents per pound. Growers who raise sea island cotton in the interior must secure new seed frequently from the coast region in order to preserve the identity of the fibre, which degenerates rapidly into upland fibre when grown away from the coast.

Aside from the difficulties presented by soil and climatic condition, there are other obstacles in the way of extending this culture beyond present well-defined limits. Among these are: Lack of proper experience in cultivating, harvesting and handling in new territory; objection to the small and partially closed sea island bolls on the part of the pickers accustomed to the upland varieties, notwithstanding the fact that they receive $1.25 per 100 pounds for picking sea island cotton and only 50 to 75 cents per 100 pounds for picking upland cotton; the necessity of using the roller gin for sea island cotton since saws injure the fibre; and the disadvantage of selling sea island cotton in a market where the buyers are unaccustomed to it.

Markets for Sea Island.

The South Carolina crop is marketed principally at Charleston and that of Georgia and Florida at Savannah, Blackshear and Valdosta, Ga. There is a marked difference in the style of the sea island cotton bales in different localities. The value of the better grades of sea island cotton is only slightly affected by the fluctuations in the size of the crop or the price of the short staple upland variety, but the amount and quality of the long staple upland cotton in the market seriously affects the price of the lower grades of sea island.

The average quantity of sea island cotton produced each year is equivalent to about 70,000 bales of 500 pounds each. Of this amount an average of 25,000 bales is exported and 45,000 bales are consumed in this country.

The sea island cotton now being grown in the West Indies is said to equal the average American product, and competes with that grown in South Carolina rather than with the inferior kinds grown in Florida and Georgia. The West Indian industry is new, having been developed largely since 1902, and is as yet of small proportions, the area devoted to its culture being estimated at 15,000 acres.

Demand for Egyptian Cotton.

Egyptian cotton, the demand for which is increasing in this country, is to some extent a competitor of sea island, and about 150,000 bales, valued at more than $14,000,000, are being imported annually. While its fibre is not so long and fine as that of sea island, it is very strong, and, being prepared more carefully for market, it is freer from waste than the American fiber and more desirable for the manufacturer. There are four principal reasons for the extensive use of Egyptian cotton in this country: It is best adapted for mercerizing and other processes that give a high finish to cloth and cause it to resemble silk; its exceptional cleanness, as well as its capacity for taking dyes, fits it for mixing with silk and for filling satens, India linens and similar goods, having a brilliant surface; the brown color of its Mit Afifi grade of this fiber allows it to be used without dyeing in manufacturing such goods as balbriggan underwear and lace curtains, in which the ecru shade is desired; and it can be used for the manufacture of sewing thread and other articles which need to be very strong and for which no other type of cotton, but sea island can be used.

Experiments in Growing.

The constantly increasing demand in this country for Egyptian cotton has led the department of agriculture to make experiments in the growing of this variety in the United States. Since this type of cotton will continue to produce and ripen until a hard frost occurs the greatest yield can be obtained in regions where the autumn temperatures are highest. For this reason the experiments of the department have been carried on by means of irrigation in the hot, dry portion of southern Arizona and southeastern California, where the climate corresponds most closely to that of Egypt.

The methods of breeding have been simple. At first the best seeds obtainable in Egypt were used. Each year the seeds of the plants showing the best characteristics of growth and production were preserved for planting the next season. Two distinct varieties and several superior strains have been developed by the experiments of the past seven years. The varieties Yuma and Somerton, named from the localities in which grown, have been developed from imported seed of the Mit Afifi, and are as distinct in character of plant, boll and fiber as the varieties of Abbasi and Jonnitch, which developed in Egypt from the same source. The Yuma variety has a vigorous growth, its bolls are long and tapering, the fiber is silky and cream colored, averaging 1 1/4 inches in length, and the production of lint is large. The plant of the Somerton variety is more bushy than that of the Yuma, its bolls are sharply pointed, have smoother seeds, and yield less lint. Samples of the fiber produced have been submitted to the examination of spinners and other experts who pronounce it equal to kindred varieties imported.

Long Staple Upland Cotton.

In recent years the demand for superior cotton staples has increased steadily and in response better varieties of upland cotton are being produced in our cotton growing States. Extra staple cotton can be grown in many localities, and through hybridization, seed selection and better methods of cultivation is being produced in greater quantities. Best of the long staple upland cotton is grown in the Mississippi valley, between Memphis, Tenn., and Vicksburg, Miss., in a strip of country about 75 miles wide and 200 miles long. Some of the cotton produced here grades almost as high as sea island. The fiber measures from 1 1/4 to 1 3/4 inches in length, the yield per acre is about three times as great as sea island, and its cost of production is less. Roller gins should be used in ginning this cotton, so that the fiber will be uniform and uninjured, but at present saw gins are used, often cutting and damaging it materially.

Cotton Experiments.

During the year 1910 experiments made in growing a better staple of cotton in South Carolina met with such success that an organized effort will be made this year to increase its cultivation. These experiments demonstrated that, where first class seed of long staple cotton had been used, the production per acre equaled or exceeded that of the short staple, and was of such quality that it could be utilized by the mills in the State in competition with that brought from the Mississippi valley.

The bureau has made diligent efforts this season to collect, through its local agents and by correspondents, reliable statistics of the quality of upland long staple cotton produced during 1910, classing as such cotton which ranges 1 1/4 inches and above. While reports have been received from numerous localities, indicating an interest in the production of this cotton, growers have not, as a rule, kept such records as enable them to supply the bureau with the accurate data desired. However, the result of the inquiry would appear to justify the estimate that the production of this cotton throughout the entire cotton belt amounted to about 300,000 bales, the States in the order of their position as producers of this fiber being Mississippi, Texas, Arkansas and South Carolina, with smaller quantities reported from all of the remaining cotton growing States.

The average price of the upland has ranged from 8.20 cents in 1902, to 14.69 cents in 1910. Sea island cotton grown in South Carolina sold in 1910 at an average price of 35.62 cents per pound, while the average for 1909 is 32.85; that grown in Georgia and Florida averaged 27.36 cents this year and 27.10 in 1909. The grades known as Georgias and Floridas sold on the same terms. The average price of Egyptian cotton for 1910 was 22.25 cents, and relates to cotton imported into the United States prior to April 1, 1911.

ITCHING IRRITATION.

Worst Form of Skin Trouble Quickly Cured by Inexpensive Treatment. When you suffer with any skin trouble even though the itching seems unbearable, do not think that it is necessary to use some disgusting greasy ointment. Try Hoka, a pure and simple skin food that is guaranteed to contain no grease or acids and which is so cleanly it does not soil the linen.

Its power to instantly relieve any irritation of the skin and make it soft, white and beautiful is almost miraculous.

Not only are minor skin troubles like pimples, blackheads, acne, barber's itch, etc., quickly cured but the worst ulcers or cases of salt rheum or eczema are cleansed and healed by this wonderful skin food.

In order that any one may try Hoka at small expense Howard Gardner is selling a liberal size jar at 25c. and in addition guarantees to refund the money if the treatment does not do all that is claimed for it. Larger size 50 cents.

Honest Medicines Versus Fakes.

President Taft's recent message suggesting an amendment to the Pure Food and Drugs law in its relation to Prepared Medicines, does not refer to such standard medicines as Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and Foley's Kidney Pills, both of which are true medicines carefully compounded of ingredients whose medicinal qualities are recognized by the medical profession itself as the best known remedial agents for the diseases they are intended to counteract. For over three decades Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has been a standard remedy for coughs, colds and affections of the throat, chest and lungs for children and for grown persons, and it retains today its pre-eminence above all other preparations of its kind. Foley Kidney Pills are equally effective and meritorious. Howard Gardner.

A woman who is willing to be a grandmother has reconciled herself to admitting she's past thirty.

Those Who Take Foley Kidney Pills For their kidney and bladder ailments, and for annoying urinary irregularities are always grateful both for the quick and permanent relief they afford, and for their tonic and strengthening effect as well. Try Foley Kidney Pills. Howard Gardner.

ANOTHER WONDER OF SCIENCE

Biology has Proved that Dandruff is Caused by a Germ.

Science is doing wonders these days in medicine as well as in mechanics. Since Adam lived, the human race has been troubled with dandruff, for which no hair preparation has heretofore proved a successful cure until Newbro's Hairpide was put on the market. It is a scientific preparation that kills the germ that makes dandruff or scurf by digging into the scalp to get at the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality, causing itching, scaling, falling hair, and finally baldness. Without dandruff hair must grow luxuriantly. It is the only destroyer of dandruff. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

John Henry Gets A Plenty

By GEORGE V. HOBART

Since Uncle Peter Grant was elected mayor of Ruraldene our family group considers it extremely distasteful to stay in the big town for more than four hours at a time. So with us it is a case of catching those imitation railroad trains at all sorts of hours and commutes to beat the band.

Since I became a confirmed commuter I have sprained three watches and two of my legs trying to catch trains that are wild enough to dodge a dog-catcher.

The commuters are divided into two classes: Going and coming.

One of the first rules for a commuter to follow after he locates the railroad station, and hikes there a couple of times to get in training, is to get a red and pink and blue hammock.

A hammock is a necessary evil in the country, because only by this means can the insects become acquainted with the new commuter.

The day after we first put up our new hammock Uncle Peter came rubbing around to look it over. He was all swelled up over being elected mayor, and he dropped in the hammock with a splash. Ten seconds later the rope exploded and Uncle Peter made a deep impression on the stone porch.

Every mosquito in the neighborhood rushed to his assistance and tried to lift him up with their teeth.

Then Uncle Peter ran home and told Aunt Martha that Cinders, our bulldog, had tried to bite him.

The national emblem of the commuter is the lawn-mower.

The lawn-mower was invented originally for the purpose of giving the lawn a quick shave, and because it can't talk like a barber it makes a noise like the fall of Fort Arthur.

I remember the first day I decided I would trim the Vandyke beard on our lawn. Of course I got all mine, and I got it good. The result will always live in history side by side with the battle of Gettysburg.

The lawn-mower was sleeping peacefully in the barn when I rushed in and dragged it shrieking from its slumbers.

Perhaps it was because I forgot to lather the lawn, but any way it was the hardest shave I ever had anything to do with.

The lawn-mower began to com-for me to come back in the ring, the lawn-mower got impatient and began to bark at me in Yiddish, so I decided that our lawn could grow whiskers like a Populist farmer and be hanged to it.

Another splendid bit of local color in the life of some commuters is the subway. A ride through this on a hot day will put you over on Woosley avenue quicker than a No. 9 pill in Hop Lee's smoke factory.

In order to get out to Ruraldene I have to use the subway, and every time I use it I leave something which looks like the mark of Cain across my brow.

The first day I went through that tunnel will always remain one of my hottest memories.

I lost nine pounds of solid flesh somewhere between my shoulder blade and the outskirts.

The sensation is the same as a Bad Man's hereafter, including the sulphur.

First I choked up a little, then I coughed, then I stirred uneasily, and then I looked out the window and prayed for the daylight, and then I looked at my newspaper, but I couldn't read it, because the railroad company had found the gas bill pretty heavy last month and they were cutting down expenses.

Then I lost my breath, and when I got it back I found it wasn't mine.

Then I began to fan myself with my hat, but I stopped when the man behind me began kicking because I was handing him more than his just share of the subway gas.

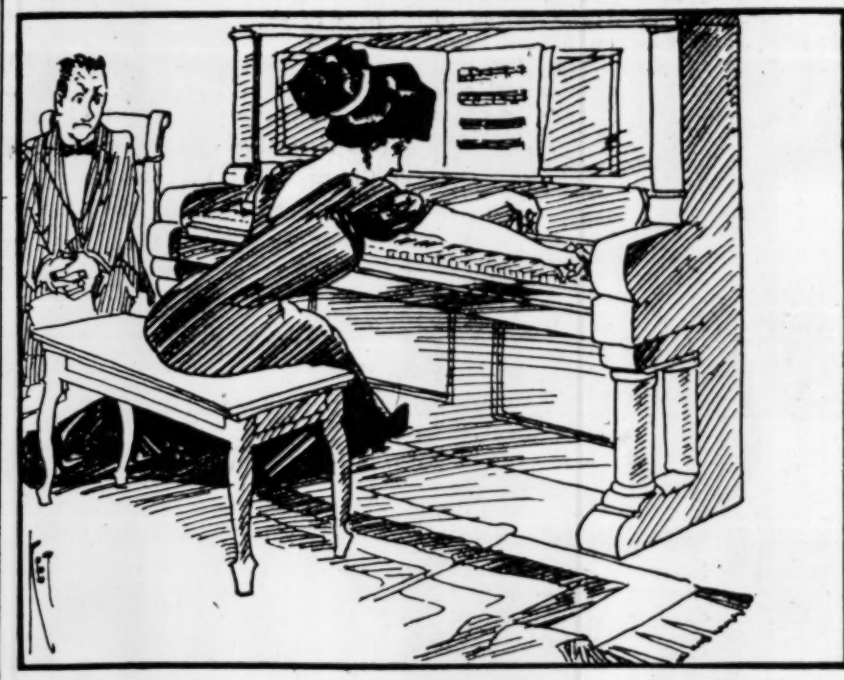

Then I began to choke up again, and then I coughed, and then I could feel something fat and mysterious playing hide and go seek around my brain, but outside all was black as ink, and only from the noise could I tell that the road was still paying dividends.

The air began to get close and thick like a porterhouse steak in a St. Louis hotel.

I began to breathe like my wife crochets an open-faced stocking—one, two, three, drop one; one, two, three, four, drop one.

Then my blood began to curdle and cold chills ran up my back and liked it so well they ran down again.

My respiration was 3 to 1, my in-plain so loudly that the neighbors for miles around rushed to the rock pile and armed themselves for the fray.

The committee of citizens attracted by the screams of the lawn-mower came over to see if I was killing a member of the family or only a distant relative.

When they saw me boxing the ears of a stubborn lawn-mower they said my punishment was heavy enough, so they threw away the lynching rope and left me at the post.

Clara J. came out on the porch and said, "John, perhaps that lawn-mower would stop screaming if you used a little axle grease!"

"All right," I came back at her, "but it will take me an hour and a half to find out which part of the lawn-mower will fit the axle grease."

Then I lifted the machinery up to examine its constitution and by-laws, and about two and a half pounds of wrought iron fell off and landed on my instep.

The wrought iron made good. Then I tried to stand on the other foot, but I lost my balance and fell on the lawn-mower's third rail.

I never was so mortified in my life as when that lawn-mower began to saw its initials on my shin bones.

Every time I tried to get up I lost my balance, and every time I lost my balance the lawn-mower would leap up in the air and fall on my wish-bone.

When loving hands finally pulled us apart I was two doors and a half below unconsciousness, while the lawn-mower had recovered its second wind and was wagging its tail with excitement.

After waiting for about ten minutes

my perspiration was like a cloud-burst.

I had made my will with a few mental and Indian reservations, and was choking up for the last time when, with one mighty jump forward, the train shook itself free from the subway and once more we were out in the sunlight.

After picking enough sulphur off my clothes to make a box of matches, I reached gently over and tried to put the window up, but it was closed tighter than the front door when a collector calls.

I gave the window-sash a couple of upper cuts and a few short-arm punches, but it sat there and laughed in my face.

The guard came through, and I spoke to him about the window. He said, "The first time I see the president of the road I'll tell him about it!" and left me flat.

Once more I tried to open that window, but I only succeeded in opening my collar; so then I opened my mouth and made a short but spicy announcement, whereupon the old lady in the seat ahead of me got up and left the car.

Just then the train pulled into a station which I hadn't paid for, but I went out and took it, because it contained a little fresh air.

Some day I will mention the name of this subway company and make it blush. Meantime you may have one guess.

Well, after I left Bunch that afternoon, I ducked for the depot, and reached Ruraldene just in time to witness the beginning of a most painful episode.

The house was lighted up from cellar to attic. As soon as I opened the door I found our respected mayor, Uncle Peter, and he was also lit up.

"It's a surprise, Johnny," he whispered hoarsely. "Clara J. is giving an entertainment for the benefit of the Christian Soldiers' league, and it's going to cost you two dollars to come into your own house."

It made an awful hit with Uncle Peter to see me cough up those two dollars, but I said nothing and made good.

My wife called it a musicale, and to me it looked more like a fight. With the help of Aunt Martha and Alice Gray, my wife arranged the program and kept it dark to surprise the rest of the family.

It was such a surprise to me that I felt like doing a glide to the woods lands.

It was my second experience with a musicale, and this one cured me all right.

For awhile everybody sat around and sized up what everybody else was wearing.

Then they gave each other the silent double-cross.

Presently my wife whispered to Miss Cleopatra Hungerschnitz, whereupon that young lady giggled her way over to the piano and began to knock its teeth out.

The way Cleopatra went after one of Beethoven's sonatas and slapped its ears was pitiful.

Cleopatra learned to injure a piano at a conservatory of music, and she could take a fugo by Victor Hugo and leave it for dead in about thirty-two bars.

Two and a Half Pounds of Iron Landed on My Instep.

At the finish of the sonata we all applauded Cleopatra just as loudly as we could, in the hope that she would faint with surprise and stop playing; but no such luck.

She tied a couple of chords together and swung that piano like a pair of Indian clubs.

First she did "My Old Kentucky Home," with variations, until everybody who had a home began to weep for fear it might get to be like her Kentucky home.

The variations were where she made a mistake and struck the right note.

Then Cleopatra moved up to the squeaky end of the piano and gave an imitation of a Swiss music box.

It sounded to me like a Swiss cheese.

Presently Cleopatra ran out of raw material and subsided, while we all applauded her with our fingers crossed, and two very thoughtful ladies began to talk fast to Cleopatra so as to take her mind off the piano.

Then the Binglebingle brothers, known as Oscar and Victor, opened fire on us with a couple of mandolins.

Oscar and Victor play entirely by hand. They don't know one note from another, and they can prove it when they begin to play.

Their mother believes them to be prodigies of genius. She is alone in her belief.

After Oscar and Victor had chased one of Sousa's marches all over the parlor and finally left it unconscious under the sofa, they bowed and ceased firing, and then they went out in the dining-room and filled their storage batteries with ice cream and cake.

This excitement was followed by another catastrophe named Minnehaha Jones, who picked up a couple of soprano songs and screamed them at us.

Minnehaha is one of those fearless singers who vocalize without a safety valve. She always keeps her eyes closed, so she can't tell just when her audience gets up and leaves the room.

The next treat was a mixed duet on the flute and trombone between Clarence Smith and Lancelot Diefenberger, with a violin obligato on the side by Hector Tompkins.

Never before have I seen music so roughly handled.

It looked like a walk-over for Clarence, but in the fifth round he blew a couple of green notes and Lancelot got the decision.

Then, for a consolation prize, Hector was led out in the middle of the room, where he assassinated Mascagni's Cavalleria Rusticana so thoroughly that it will never be able to enter a fifty-cent table d'hôte restaurant again.

Then Cornucopia Coogan arose and gave us a few select recitations.

Just as she started to tell us that Curfew would not ring tonight Uncle Peter winked at me, and we sneaked out and began to drown our sorrow.

Those musicales would be all to the good if the music didn't suffocate them.

Society Men Risk Their Necks Playing Exciting Polo Game

POLO might be described as a combination of croquet, association football, golf and hockey played on horseback. Of course the polo players will object to any suggestion that their game has anything in common with such peaceful sports as croquet or golf, but it is a fact that they are pounding a ball with mallets. But this is about the only way the game resembles the more quiet pastimes, for polo is played by men mounted on alert and wiry ponies that are ready to risk their own and their riders' necks any minute. The picture above, made during the first game between the famous New York Meadowbrooks and the English army team on Long Island, shows the danger of the sport. Larry Waterbury, a member of the American team, is shown after his pony has fallen and he has been thrown several yards along the muddy turf. In the game of polo much depends on the ponies—nearly as much as on the men. The Americans used about a dozen and a half of mounts in the first game, two of them being Texas animals, four from California and the others being from England. The Britons used horses that they had brought with them from England, though one of their animals was bred in California and was shipped to England three years ago. About 20,000 persons saw the contest, which was exciting from the start until the finish.

ENCOURAGING MEN OF FORTY

Many Famous Persons Have Achieved Their Greatest Successes After Reaching That Age.

B. W. Leader, R. A., the well-known artist, who has just celebrated his eightieth birthday, affords one more proof that a man is not too old at forty, or even at eighty. Burns, Byron, Keats, Shelley, Mozart and Raphael died young, but most of the greatest achievements have been the work of men who had reached the fortieth year. In fact, the sixth decade of life has been the most prolific in human master work. Within that period of existence Caesar wrote his "commentaries," Bacon his "Novum Organum" and Dante his "Divine Comedy." Cromwell was fifty when he defeated Charles I.; Columbus, Humboldt, Galvani, John Hunter, Kepler and Faraday, had they died before they attained that age, would not have effected their most important discoveries. Handel's "Messiah" and Beethoven's "Choral Symphonies" would not have been composed. Marborough would not have won. Blenheim, Velasquez' "Pope Innocent," Rembrandt's "Syndics," Gainsborough's "Morning Walk," Constable's "Valley Farm" would not have been painted; Turner's legacy to the world would have been robbed of much of its splendor had his and their genius failed at fifty, while Titian, after he had passed Mr. Leader's age, produced more than one masterpiece.—London Post.

Potato Exploded.

A potato, the size of a tea cup, caused extraordinary havoc in a home in Vancouver, Wash., the other day when it exploded in the oven of a range and shattered the cast-iron grate, blew open the oven door, and caused such a loud report that the maid thinking someone had shot at her rushed from the house screaming for help. The explosion was due to the large amount of water in the potato and to the fact that it was in a hot oven. When the water was converted to steam, the skin being baked hard, did not break until the pressure became tremendous, causing a report similar to the discharge of a shotgun.

The reason a girl's hair doesn't curl naturally is she knows it does, but the other girls won't admit it.

It's queer how a man who has even sense enough to keep out of law suits won't have enough to let other people do all the family quarreling.

But a golf player should know what he is driving at.

Shot Wife Instead of Burglar.

New Orleans, July 14.—As the result of an attempted invasion of their home by an unknown intruder early yesterday morning, Mrs. Luther Morris, wife of a carpenter at Rio, La., met with a peculiar accident. On hearing a noise on the front porch of their home Morris seized his shot-gun and proceeded to investigate, his wife following him. Hearing the man outside tampering with the lock of the door, Morris raised his gun to fire. Mrs. Morris at the same time placed her hand on the fastening of the door and received a load of buckshot in her right arm, which was amputated near the shoulder at a local hospital. The intruder escaped probably unhurt.

Damage reports from the central States, apprehension over the continued rains there, a better demand for contracts by the trade, but principally a fear of each other among the shorts (owing to the oversold state of the market) caused steadiness and an advance in the second hour, October selling to 12.71.

WANT TO LEARN TO MILK?

One Way in Which City People Prepare for Their Vacations in the Country.

In the vacation literature that is distributed daily in one section of the upper west side, is a leaflet which urges every reader to prepare for country pleasures by learning to milk a cow, says the New York Times. Then follows the address of a cow that is willing to furnish practice for the neophyte. She is an amiable-looking animal tethered in a roomy stable.

"Want to learn to milk?" asks the cow's owner.

The visitor doesn't; she just wants to find out if anybody else does. "Sure!" says the owner. "Lots of 'em! Get my milking done for nothing nowadays. Somebody comes to practice three times a day. They'd come oftener if I'd let 'em. You see, one of the first things the real city folk do when they get into the country for a week or two is to tackle a cow and a milk pail. This is accomplished surrounded by spectators. The farmer's family, anyhow, looks on, and maybe several city folks."

"There are unlimited ways in which a fellow can make a fool of himself, but he can achieve absolute idiocy easiest by milking a cow for the first time. Contrarywise, nothing gives a man's reputation for coolheadedness such a boost as to come through the ordeal creditably. Apparently a lot of New Yorkers have decided to make a name for themselves by milking a cow without being kicked over, for I have just rented another cow to accommodate all the people who want to learn."

ANSWERING A CAMPAIGN LIE

Politician of Long Ago Was Resourceful and Knew With Whom He Had to Deal.

"A man was sent to jail recently in England," said a western senator in Washington, "for circulating a false report that King George had contracted a morganatic marriage while he was a young sailor, stationed at Malta. 'Since the morganatic marriage is one of a king's privileges, it is rather surprising that King George, in prosecuting this case, holds that it touches his honor.'"

The senator smiled. "However," he continued, "the king evidently disapproves of morganatic unions as strongly as the political supporters of Adams disapproved of a royal marriage for their candidate. 'A western supporter of Adams complained to a friend that somebody had been telling the voters that Adams had married a daughter of George III., an untruth which, he averred, would lose Adams every vote in the west. 'If that is the case,' said his friends, 'why not contradict the yarn at once?'"

"Oh," replied the partisan, 'that would not be of the slightest use; you don't know these westerners. They are pig-headed. They will believe anything and disbelieve nothing. No—we must not contradict this wicked lie, we must allow that Adams did marry a daughter of George III., but we must swear that Jackson, his opponent, married two of George III.'s daughters!'"

It takes so much money to pay for some people's luxuries that they have nothing left for the necessities.

Daughter of E. P. Wharton Dies in Berlin, Germany

R. W. Murray yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock received a cablegram from E. P. Wharton, in Berlin, Germany, which conveyed to him the sad intelligence that Miss Ida, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Wharton, had died while aboard on a tour of Europe. The message gave no further particulars of her death, leaving the inference that the child was taken suddenly and desperately ill. The extended continental tour planned by Mr. Wharton and his family is necessarily cut short and the entire party will return to this city as soon as possible, bringing with them the body of the deceased for burial in Greensboro. They will sail on next Tuesday for New York on the steamer Crown Prince Wilhelm, which is due in port on Friday, July 28th, or on Saturday following. Further particulars will be received from Mr. Wharton when the landing of the party is made in New York.

SENATOR LODGE INVITED BY POE TO VISIT RALEIGH

Washington, July 14.—Clarence H. Poe today invited Senator Lodge to Raleigh to address the North Carolina Historical and Literary Society in the fall, the date to be fixed by Mr. Lodge. Mr. Lodge will go. He virtually promised Mr. Page.

Senator Overman has accepted an invitation to go to West Virginia over Sunday with Senator Watson and party.

Senator Bailey and other well known Democrats will be in the party, which will travel in Mr. Watson's private car.

County Home Inmates Feasted.

A day or two ago the members of the W. C. T. U. of Guilford College, carrying a large number of baskets completely filled with all known picnic dainties, drove in several carriages to the County Home and furnished the inmates with an agreeable surprise by giving them a delightful supper on the lawn. The ladies who were the hostesses of the occasion supplied a bountiful meal, and, needless to say, the inmates did justice to the good things provided, and greatly appreciated the kindness of the ladies.

Big Attraction At the Ottaway Theatre.

The Ottaway theatre was the centre of attraction for the amusement lovers yesterday with the reproduction of their noted feature pictures, "The Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration." This famous film was made in Cheyenne, Wyoming, and besides showing the thousands of plainsmen and Redskins gathered in the great "jubilee." Colonel Theodore Roosevelt is shown mingling in their sports and amusements. This enormous attraction is shown in three reels totaling 3,000 feet of pictures displayed upon the canvas and will be continued throughout the day. Crowds will doubtless flock to its doors as all visitors were well pleased yesterday.

Sues Southern for $5,000.

Winston, July 14.—A damage suit entitled J. E. Painter vs. the Southern Railway Company has been instituted in the superior court here, wherein the plaintiff is suing for $5,000.

The plaintiff alleges that while repairing a shifting engine at Spencer on January 22, 1910, a piece of a bolt which he was chiseling off flew off and destroyed the sight of his right eye.

The plaintiff alleges negligence on the part of the defendant in that he desired to get the bolt out with a drill, which he said was the proper way, but alleges that the foreman told him that this method would take too long.

EDUCATION MEETING ENDS AT SAN FRANCISCO

Special to Telegram.

San Francisco, Cal., July 14.—Delegates to the annual convention of the National Education Association today left their last regular meetings and tomorrow they will all be on their way to their homes or summer resorts where they will spend the remainder of their vacations. The exodus of the seven thousand even began in a mild way today, when members of those special sections which had completed their work took their departure.

At the departmental meetings today there were several addresses of interest. Some of the most interesting were: "Growing Children," by Cyril A. Stephens, instructor in agricultural education at the University of California; "Art as a Cultivator of the Imagination," by May Gerhart, supervisor of drawing in the schools of Los Angeles, Cal.; "How to Prevent Backwardness and Mental Deficiency in Children," by Henry H. Goddard, director of the New Jersey School for the Feeble-minded; "What Constitutes a Subnormal Child," by Elsie C. Hecks, special psychologist of the Oakland, Cal., schools; and "The Kindergarten of the Future," by Dr. Frank E. Parlin, superintendent of Schools of Cambridge, Mass.

Dr. Parlin's remarks drew forth great approval in the discussion by the delegates of the section on Kindergarten Education. He declared the present type of kindergartens is more harmful than beneficial to the child, when compared to what should be done. Dr. Parlin advocated out-of-door kindergartens and a freer policy in their administration, giving to the children a greater opportunity to exercise their individuality and inventiveness.

"Although a friend of the kindergarten," he said, "I believe the orthodox type is neither sacred nor perfect, that the position of the conservative kindergartens is unwise and untenable, that they emphasize the most defective parts of Froebel's system and neglect his most valuable principles."

"The kindergarten of the future will be true to its name, a garden of children, will generally be out of doors, in the sunlight and open air, among the trees and flowers, and associated with birds and animals, providing healthful conditions for the body, appropriate food for the senses, abundant exercise for the muscles, ample scope for the imagination and unfeeling topics for conversation. The healthy growth of the child will be the prime consideration, large lungs, good digestion a strong heart, and steady nerves outwearing peg-sticking and a meagre knowledge of sphere, cylinder and cube.

"It will recognize the supreme value of all kinds of real play, which call into well-timed and well-measured action both mind and body.

"It will give much attention to oral language, each child having frequent opportunity to tell his stories and to ask questions.

"There will be wise supervision, but little of that direction which robs the child of original thought and independent action; more individual effort, less uniformity and concert work; more appeal to the sensibility, less training of the intellect; more natural growth and development, less precocity and self-consciousness. It will be more of a nursery, less of a school. It will stand for the rights of the child; the right to be a child, to think as a child, to speak as a child, to understand as a child, in order that, when he becomes a man, he may put away childish things and be as much of a man as possible."

LORD CAMOYS ENGAGED TO AN AMERICAN HEIRESS

Special to Telegram.

London, July 14.—Adolph Francis Julian Stonor, Lord Camoys, usher at the Decies-Gould wedding, and chum of Hon. Bobby Berford, is engaged to be married to Miss Mildred Sherman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Watts Sherman, one of the wealthiest heiresses in the United States. This became known today following the announcement that Camoys is to leave England to visit the Shermans in Newport.

PEOPLE OF NEW MEXICO ANXIOUS FOR STATEHOOD.

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 14.—A telegram received today at the White House from Albuquerque, New Mexico, appealed to President Taft to do something to dispell the interruption to business that is caused by the Statehood bill in Congress. The President was informed that conditions were terrible and that business was at a standstill all over the territory.

HATS FOR YOUNGSTERS

TENDENCY TOWARD MUSHROOM SHAPE PREVAILS THIS SEASON.

Nothing Else Stays So Comfortably on Small Head or Forms Such Becoming Shade to Little Face—Directions for Making.

All through the spring and early summer children will be wearing hats which tend distinctly towards the mushroom in outline. Nothing else stays so comfortably on a small head, or forms such a becoming shade to the little face. The slight turn-up at the front of the brim strikes a note that is very novel and fashionable this season.

We should like best to see this idea worked out in fine white straw, with a white riband bow edged with narrow cream lace, but a fair little girl would look perfectly charming in a black hat, with blue ribands and an edging of the lightest black lace imaginable.

The first thing to do is to line the straw. Stitch into the head a small square of sarsnet or thin silk; then cut another piece about four inches wide and as much in measurement as the line around the inside of the brim. Track this down to the straw, as shown in the illustration, and run a tape through the hemmed edge of it.

Do not draw up this tape at present, but leave it hanging loosely, so that you can easily fit your hand up into the hat.

Now cut a circle of buckram or stout muslin about four inches across. Take a long length of riband or hemmed silk edged with lace, and sew it round and round this circle, finishing it off at the center with a tiny knot of plain riband to hide the join.

Fold a piece of riband round the crown of the hat, and fasten it off in front. Sew down the puff over the join, attaching only through the foundation, and leaving the frills to stand up as lightly and loosely as they please.

Now draw up the head lining. Sew on a piece of elastic at the sides of the hat to hold it in place on the head. Stitch on long riband strings at the same points, and tie them in a loose bow under the chin.

It would be rather a good plan to get a very nice straw and make up several different puffs and sets of strings in various colors to match the child's different frocks. The trimming could be removed and another one put on so quickly that there is no reason why the girl should not be always en suite from top to toe. This idea would be specially handy for anyone who is traveling with a child. Light hats so soon get dusty on boats and in trains that nurse will probably be glad to have at hand several new sets of trimmings, so that she may put on a new one in the evening, and may know that her little charge will start out next morning looking perfectly fresh and spruce.

Handsome Meat Stand.

Give the June bride one of the new stands to hold a meat platter, which come in open-work silver, in oval form, and have silver feet to raise the dish slightly from the table.

The stand divides in the middle and can be adjusted to hold any platter. One of the models has a small alcohol lamp beneath the opening to keep the meat hot.

While in solid silver such a stand is extremely costly, yet very good designs can be found in plated ware. These stands are highly useful, as they do away with unsightly asbestos mats and make scarred tables impossible.

Grace in Train.

Chic as a short skirt is for the street, it lacks the grace loved for indoors, especially for evening wear, and however prettily woman's feet are shod, few can rise superior to the graceful sitting attitude, shorn of draping folds, which one is forced to assume in a short, close skirt. French women love grace above smartness, therefore they soon discard the short skirted evening toilet for the pretty little train of the twentieth century—a narrow, unstiffened breadth of velvet or brocade, dragging its slender length from the belt over the short skirt beneath. Slender as it is, it gives grace, the length of line, demanded of an evening toilet.

Women and Society

In Honor of Miss Apple and Miss Beard.

Between the hours of 10 and 12 Thursday morning Misses Mildred and Madeleine Stafford were the hostesses at a charming party tendered at their home on West Washington street, to a score of their young friends complimentary to their house guests, Miss Maggie Apple of Norfolk, Va. Seated comfortably about the porch the young ladies enjoyed several contests of Nations and Progressive Hearts. Delightful music from some of the guests aided in whiling away the time, which passed in a most pleasant manner. Light refreshments were served at the conclusion of the game.

Miss Clark's Reception.

Miss Laura Polly Clark was the hostess at a delightful informal reception Thursday evening at her home on West Washington street. Almost the entire number of 75 invited guests were in attendance, despite the inclement weather and were royally entertained by their hostess. The porch party was given to the young people in honor of Miss Janie Marshall of Danville, the house guest of the hostess, and Miss Myrtle Davis, who is visiting Mrs. M. Schiffman, on West Washington street.

From 8:30 to 11:30 the visitors passed the evening in merry games and impromptu amusements. Delicious punch was served from large bowls at both ends of the porch. The rain pouring down on the outside could not dampen the spirits and gaiety of the happy crowd within, and all enjoyed a most pleasant evening.

Baumhoefener—Jacobs.

In a quiet wedding performed at the home of the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. H. Jacobs, 245 Belvedere street, Thursday evening, Miss Carrie Jacobs and Prof. Walter Baumhoefener of St. Paul, Minn., were joined in wedlock in a beautiful and impressive ceremony. Rev. George D. Mennen, pastor of the Ebenezer Lutheran church, administered the vows which were spoken in German.

The parlor was beautifully decorated for the event with an abundance of Queen Ann lace, and smilax and other green plants. An altar was erected in the center of the room behind which Rev. Dr. Mennen stood as the bride party approached. The bride entered on the arm of her father, Mr. H. Jacobs, who gave her away. She was gowned beautifully in a creation of white marquisette over satin, and carried a large bouquet of bride's roses. The groom, accompanied by his best man, Victor Baumhoefener, his brother, joined the party at the altar as the final strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin were rendered with fine effect by Paul Meyers, of Wahpeton, N. Da. An appropriate air was used during the ceremony and Mendelssohn's wedding march was played for the recessional.

Miss Bertha Jacobs, sister of the bride, dressed charmingly in lingerie over silk, served as maid of honor. The flower girls, little Misses Christine Maas and Hannah Jacobs, in becoming dresses of white, strewed roses in the path of the newly wedded bride.

The happy couple left the city Thursday night on train No. 38 for a bridal tour to New York, the Hudson Valley, and the Great Lakes. Following this for several days they will be guests at the home of the groom's parents, Rev. and Mrs. Baumhoefener, in Young America, Minn. They will be at home about the first of September in St. Paul.

Played Football With Bomb.

New York, July 14.—As he was leaving a Brooklyn police station early this morning, Sergeant Mitchell Lane espied an object on the sidewalk which looked like a rubber football. He stepped back a few steps, got a running start and gave the supposed ball a kick. It was a bomb. The sergeant fell to the street unconscious and every window in the station house was shattered. The sergeant was removed to the hospital in an unconscious condition. Detectives who examined the fragments of the bomb said it contained enough powder to blow up a city block.

OFFICERS NEW CHURCH IN FAYETTEVILLE ORDAINED

Fayetteville, July 14.—The officers of the newly organized Haymont Presbyterian church, were ordained last night by Rev. L. W. Curtis, evangelist for Fayetteville Presbytery and Rev. Watson M. Fairley, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Fayetteville, in the latter church. Messrs. J. C. McDunmire and S. M. Reed were ordained elders and Messrs. J. M. DeVane and J. M. McEall, deacons.

A building committee and committee on employment of a pastor were appointed by the new congregation, and work will start at once towards the erection of house of worship. Until that time services will be held in the old Donaldson Academy.

Automobile Exploded.

New York, July 14.—A peculiar automobile accident today killed Arthur A. Daley, a chauffeur, and injured Arthur Weisbecker, his employer, who was with him in the car. Unexpectedly seeing before him an excavation in the street Daley suddenly shut off the power and applied the brakes. Immediately there was an explosion and a burst of flames, and both men were thrown out of the machine. Weisbecker will recover. The automobile was destroyed by fire.

Man That Looked Like Tom Reed.

I remember meeting the late Frederic P. Vinton downtown one day some years ago. Our talk was interrupted by his pausing to regard very intently the figure of a passerby of almost herculean size. He said in his quiet way: "There is the man I have been looking for—and I don't know him! I wish I did. You see it is like this: I have an order from the State of Maine to paint a full length life size portrait of the late Speaker Thomas B. Reed, whom I never saw. Now the man who has just passed has Reed's figure almost identically, as I gather from some very good photographs given me. If I could only get this man, or some one like him, to give me a few sittings for the figure it would help out. But I have got to do the best I can." And he did; he always did.—From a letter in the Boston Transcript.

Toothpick Industry Threatened.

Maine's great toothpick industry is threatened. It is reported that the bottom has dropped out of the market, and that manufacturing in the new concrete mill of the International Manufacturing company will be curtailed. Within a few weeks the little mouth crows have been worth $25 a case at wholesale, and today they are quoted at $3, which is less than the cost to manufacture. The popular stock now on hand will be made into matches. To sum up, there is evidently a glut in the market, but nobody seems to know how it occurred. With one mill at Strong and two at Dixfield, all within a radius of 30 miles, three-fourths of the wooden toothpick industry of the world is represented.—Kennebec (Me.) Journal.

This announcement will be received with some interest as Mr. Bellamy has many political and personal friends in this district. There is a possibility that he will soon resign as chairman of the Brunswick county committee from the State Democratic committee, of which he is a member, in order to get things in line for his announced candidacy in 1913.

EIGHT YEAR OLD BOY WAS DROWNED IN CAPE FEAR

Special to Telegram.

Wilmington, July 14.—With the fishing rod he held when he disappeared from sight under the waters of the Cape Fear river still grasped in his hand, the lifeless body of John Sterling Singletary, eight year old son of Capt. K. S. Singletary of this city, was pulled from the Cape Fear River this morning. He was drowned yesterday evening and all last night the river at the point where the lad was drowned was dragged. This morning the fishing rod was seen sticking from the water and by this the body was located. Three boys were in a boat fishing when it looked like the boat was going to upset and the two older boys jumped out and swam ashore and the Singletary boy endeavored to do likewise.

Woman's Beauty

Some women retain their beauty to an advanced age. But women, who regularly endure pain, age rapidly, for suffering leaves its lasting marks on them.

Nearly all women suffer more or less with some form of female trouble. It should not be neglected. Avoid the pain—treat yourself at home by taking Cardui, as thousands of other women have done. Begin at once and give Cardui a fair trial.

TAKE CARDUI

It Will Help You

Mrs. Katie Burdison, Goreville, Ill., tried Cardui and writes: "I suffered with female troubles, and was so sick I could not stand on my feet. Finally I began to take Cardui, and soon began to mend. Now I am able to do all my housework and am in much better health than I was before." Try it.

Manasseh's Wickedness and Penitence. 2 Chron. xxxiii:1-20.
Golden Text—Cease to do evil; learn to do well. Isa. i:16-17.

(1) Verses 1-2—Whose son was Manasseh and what was the character of his father?

(2) When the son of a good father becomes a bad man how do you account for it?

(3) To what extent may good parents be assured that their children will also be good?

(4) What scriptural or philosophical ground is there for the belief, that children may be so trained that they will certainly be Christians?

(5) Upon which depends most the character of children, the father or the mother?

(6) Verses 3-5—In what particular respect did Manasseh sin against God?

(7) That land was rife with idolatry, and God made strict laws against it; why did he do so?

(8) What were in those days the grave evils of idolatry?

(9) What habits to-day, among Christian people, are equivalent to idolatry?

(10) What are the results of present day idolatrous habits?

(11) Verses 6-7—What is meant by "enchantments, familiar spirits and wizards?"

(12) Why does the Bible forbid use of all such occult things as mentioned in verse six?

(13) How do you class palmistry, looking into the tea-cup for signs, thirteen sitting at the table, unlucky Friday and similar "signs?"

(14) How do you estimate a witch, or a wizard, that is a bad person supposed to have the power of exercising, mentally, an evil influence upon another?

(15) What is your estimate of those that have "familiar spirits," persons who claim to communicate with the spirits of the dead?

(16) Verse 8—How long did God say that the Israelites should possess the land of Canaan, and on what conditions?

(17) Which of God's promises if any, are absolute or unconditional?

(18) Verses 9-10—When good people become degenerate, are they or not generally worse than those who have always been bad?

(19) How did God probably speak to Manasseh and his people, and how does God speak to sinners to-day?

(20) Verse 11—God is here said to have brought the army of the king of Assyria to war with Israel, and to take Manasseh prisoner as a result of his sin. Does God in these days punish sin in any such material way?

(21) Verses 12-20—What is the general effect of punishment upon sinners?

(22) Why did not Manasseh know that the Lord was God before his punishment and repentance?

(23) God freely forgave Manasseh the moment he repented; does He always act the same way with sinners?

(24) Were all the effects of Manasseh's sins blotted out, as well as the sins themselves? (This is one of the questions that may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

Making Use of the Rhine.
The German Rhine is commercially the most important stream in the world. It furnishes a most illuminating contrast to the decadent Mississippi.

The United States has expended more money in the twenty years ended in 1907 on the most important stretch of the Mississippi, 206 miles between St. Louis and Cairo, than the German central government has expended in the improvement of the Rhine from Strassburg to the frontier of Holland, a distance of 355 miles.

Yet the amount of tonnage handled on this portion of the Mississippi in 1908 was 374,093 tons, while that on the Rhine in the same year was between 40,000,000 and 45,000,000 tons, an amount from eighty to 100 times as great.—American Review of Reviews.

How It Was Remarkable.
An elderly gentleman of rural appearance had hardly seated himself in the crosstown street car, says Judge, when a young lady who had followed him in approached him.

"Sir, did you lose a five-dollar bill?" she asked.

For a moment the farmer observed her with a surprised, curious look, then said convincingly: "Yes, ma'am, I did."

"Then here it is," said she, handing the bill to him. "I picked it up behind you from the car floor."

"Thank ye very much, young lady, for your honesty. This is a most remarkable happening!"

"Oh, I don't think so, sir! I believe every one should return the money in such a case as this. What is there so remarkable about it?"

"Why, I lost my five-dollar bill two years ago!"

Had to Find Out.
Under ordinary conditions, he was a man of prominence—but, as he ascended the steps of his residence, very early in the morning, it was very evident that he desired to be as much otherwise as possible. The caddy was lingering near by to see that his charge was safely disposed of for the night. The door opened before the man on the steps could get the key to work, and he was greeted with the question: "Henry, where have you been?" (Silence.) "Henry! Where have you been?" (He turns to descend the steps.) "Are you going to answer my question?" "Yes, dearie heart, I am. From my personal knowledge, beloved o' my soul, I can't give th' desired information. So you jest lay down again while I go back an' ask th' hack driver!"

Sh. Probably Was Worth It.
"I proposed last night and today I have to see the girl's father."

"A painful ordeal."

"Yes; I feel morally certain that he is going to borrow at least $50."

Not Very Fast.
"I understand," says the father, "that you have been going with a very fast set."

"Fast nothing!" retorts the son. "Why, not one of them has a four-wheeled car!"—Judge.

He Got It.
Lady—Yes, I've an umbrella that needs mending, but how am I to know that you will bring it back?

Umbrella Mender—Have no fear, mum. I allus charges more for mending than I could sell the umbrella for.

At the Junction

Julian Grove, burdened with a heavy suitcase and an humble pride, descended the steps of the yellow day-coach that formed half of the only train on the Lindon Valley road. He sat himself on an unused baggage truck to wait until the south-bound train should come along.

Julian preferred the winter sunlight and the crisp air to the lifeless heat of the big stove and the reek of many bodies. He was going humbly to confess his faults, and he wanted to keep clear headed that they might remain fresh in his mind.

He felt that he needed to be watchful, for in his heart he believed the faults to be few. There was grave danger that he might forget again that he was the offender, and take the same attitude of injured dignity that had caused Lottie Maynard to go hurrying back to the city with the declaration that when he came to his senses she might be ready to talk to him again.

There was an accent on the "might" that left the matter in doubt, and Julian felt that it behooved him to keep vividly in mind what Lottie declared to be his offenses.

Mentally Julian recited the catechism of his offenses, punctuating his self-examination with appropriate remarks concerning a train that was two hours late. He was still occupied with this task when a distant whistle sounded, and the waiting passengers hurried from the station to the platform. There was some grumbling when it was seen that this was only a slow train from the south instead of the desired south-bound, but they lined up along the platform to watch the arrival of the few passengers who were making a change. Then they hurried back to the warmth of the waiting room.

Only one girl remained behind to walk briskly up and down the platform. With a glad cry of surprise Julian hurried toward her.

"What are you doing here, Lottie?" he asked, as he took her hand in his.

"Where are you going?" she countered.

"I was running down to town to see you," he explained. "And to think of finding you here, on your way to Lindon."

"I was not going to Lindon," declared the girl. "I was going on, but somehow I stopped off the train through habit, and the train went on without me."

"I was hoping that you were coming back to me," he said tenderly, but Lottie tossed her head.

"I told you that when you were ready to admit that you were at fault, that you might write, and that then perhaps I would come. You don't suppose that I would change my mind, do you?"

"No such luck," she admitted dismally. "That was why I was coming to you."

"To apologise?" she demanded, and Julian nodded his head.

A gleam of triumph flashed into Lottie's eyes, but she was not to be won so easily. She had very pronounced ideas on the proper way of handling the man she purposed to marry, and now that he was penitent, she was in no hurry to make the sweet surrender that Julian sought.

"I suppose you are saying that just because you want to make up," she declared judiciously. "I don't know that it should count."

"You said that when I would admit that I was in the wrong you would be my friend again," reminded Julian.

"But what's the use of admitting that you are wrong, when you don't mean it?" argued Lottie. "You'll say the same things again the first time that you want to be nasty."

"Don't you believe it," advised Julian with convincing emphasis. "If you would only know how utterly miserable I have been since you went back to town! That was why I decided to come, instead of writing."

"And almost missed me," supplied Lottie. "I think, Julian, that I'll make my visit, and in the meantime think about coming to Lindon on the way back."

Julian's face darkened. "I wish you'd make up now," he pleaded. "The fact that we met each other here at the Junction proves that it was meant by fate that we should be friends again."

For a moment the girl hesitated. She had meant to keep Julian on the anxious seat for a few weeks, but now that he was coming, penitent and conquered, she felt that perhaps it would be well to surrender before he should again change his mind. The patent leather tip of her shoe dug into the snow.

"It does seem a little like the working of fate," she admitted. "Here I go out of town to visit in Peltonville and you are on your way to town to see me. You are waiting at the Junction for a train that is late and I am left behind by my train."

"Then accept the omen and say that you will make up," he urged. "We can go back to town and pick out the ring and then we'll come back to Lindon and tell the folks."

For another tense moment Lottie hesitated, then she nodded and Julian gave a shout of joy.

"There's the whistle of our train," he cried. "I'll hurry in and get you a ticket back to town."

"I'm glad that he didn't know that I was on my way to give in," said Lottie half aloud. "It will be hard enough, anyway, to manage him without letting him know that."

Westminster Abbey When King Arrived to Receive His Crown

HISTORIC old Westminster abbey was again the center of interest when King George and Queen Mary went there to be crowned. The above picture shows the arrival of the royal personages drawn by eight richly caparisoned horses. Westminster abbey is in a peculiar sense the national sanctuary of England. It was originally the abbey church of a monastery founded during the reign of King Offa of Mercia in the eighth century and was reorganized by Dunstan in 971. King Edward the Confessor made the church important and built an edifice on the present site between 1040 and 1065. In the latter part of the thirteenth century King Henry III. undertook the reconstruction of the church, which was consecrated in 1268. The work was continued by his successors during the next five centuries. The total exterior length of the structure is 425 feet 6 inches, and the breadth is 208 feet 2 inches. English kings since William the Conqueror have been crowned there, and the bones of thirteen kings, five sovereign queens and numerous consorts and descendants of kings repose there. Many noted statesmen, soldiers, poets and authors have also been buried there.

Hay Fever and Summer Colds

That be relieved quickly and Foley's Honey and Tar Compound will do it. E. M. Stewart, 1034 Wolfram St., Chicago, writes: "I have been greatly troubled during the hot summer months with Hay Fever and find that by using Foley's Honey and Tar Compound I get great relief." Many others who suffer similarly will be glad to benefit by Mr. Stewart's experience. Howard Gardner.

Escaped With His Life.

"Twenty-one years ago I faced an awful death," writes H. B. Martin, Port Harrison, S. C. "Doctors said I had consumption and the dreadful cough I had looked like it, sure enough. I tried everything I could hear of, for my cough, and was under the treatment of the best doctor in Georgetown, S. C., for a year, but could get no relief. A friend advised me to try Dr. King's New Discovery. I did so, and was completely cured. I feel that I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure." Its positively guaranteed for coughs, colds, and all bronchial affections. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free at Fariss Klutz Drug Co.

Backache, hip pains, headache. Early symptoms of kidney ills. Urinary troubles, dropsy, Bright's disease follow.

The statement below shows you what to do.

Mr. Arthur Causey, Jerusalem St., Newkirk, N. C., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills and found them excellent in every way. Backache clung to me a long time and made it difficult for me to stoop. I could not remain on my feet for any length of time and often I became so dizzy that I had to catch hold of something to keep from falling. The kidney secretions annoyed me and showed that my kidneys were disordered. When a friend strongly urged me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I did so and I was soon entirely rid of kidney complaint."

Glittering Pageant When King George Rode to His Coronation

Photos copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

EIGHT horses were used to draw the state coach in which King George and Queen Mary went to and from their coronation in Westminster Abbey. In the picture above this royal equipage is shown proceeding along the Mall with the king and queen wearing the crowns that had just been adjusted and trying to look as if they enjoyed it and were accustomed to the pomp and ceremony. In the other picture King George, seated beside Queen Mary, is shown as he received the pearl sword from the lord mayor of London. This ceremony, which took place at Temple Bar, signified that the king had received the freedom of the city, in this case meaning the city of London proper, a comparatively small portion of the London of today. The king merely touched the hilt of the sword as a token that he had accepted it, and it remained in the custody of the lord mayor.

WOMAN PRAYED FOR TEXAS GOVERNOR IN PROHIBITION CAMPAIGN

Houston, Tex., July 14.—July 22 the people of Texas vote on the question of Statewide prohibition. For three months the State has been torn by the campaign, which is growing more bitter as the date of election approaches. Both the prohibitionists and the antis are claiming the election by big majorities, the antis advancing figures based on a Statewide canvass on which they claim victory by 110,000.

The bitterness of the campaign has injected personalities and the battles of the Democratic primary and election last year are being lived over again in this campaign. In that election the present governor, O. B. Colquitt, known as the "wet" candidate, was elected by a heavy majority over two prohibition aspirants. However at the same time a heavy vote favoring the submission of the liquor traffic question was polled. This paradoxical situation has made impossible the forecast as to the tide of sentiment, the only solution probably being in the fact that although Colquitt was the majority choice for governor the people of Texas wish the liquor question settled this year—but how?

Naturally Governor Colquitt is a pronounced adherent of the cause of the antis, for his views were made clear in his campaign. But notwithstanding this recently he was petitioned by 900 women of Austin not to speak at an anti-prohibition meeting to be held the following night at which he was scheduled to be the principal orator.

The petition was submitted shortly after 6 o'clock one evening, just as the governor was preparing to close his office. One of the fair petitioners appeared as spokesman who presented the paper "in the name of the mothers and sisters of Travis county." The governor respectfully read the petition through, then dug down in a bottom drawer of his desk and produced a copy of a speech by General Sam Houston, "the Washington of Texas"—made in 1836 to a delegation of ministers who asked him to support a prohibition law. General Sam Houston refused, putting himself on record as unalterably opposed to Statewide prohibition.

After quoting from this speech Governor Colquitt declared he saw no reason why through the medium of churches his right of free speech should be curbed. He said his views on the prohibition question were well known. "I stand for local option," declared the governor, "but should prohibition be carried I will do all in my power to enforce the law throughout the State."

One of his fair petitioners undertook to convince the governor of the error of his ways, declaring her belief that "the governor's office should not be used to further the cause of private interests." The governor remained firm, however, and announced he would speak as scheduled.

After a moment of silence one of the women knelt a few feet from the governor's chair and prayed. Her supplication besought Divine forgiveness for the State's executive's acts and asked that he might see the error of his ways. With this climax the delegation departed.

MERELY OBEYED THE RULES

How the Late Tom Johnson, in Early Life, Squirmed Out of Very Tight Places.

When the late Tom Johnson started in life he drove a horse car in Indianapolis.

One night there was a big storm of sleet and snow and the tracks were almost hidden. Johnson was on the night shift, and in the storm he drove his car two blocks beyond a curve before he realized the car was off the tracks and slipping along on the ice.

He tried to pull the car back and failed. Thereupon he unbolted the horses, drove them back to the barn and left the car where it was.

Next day the superintendent called him. "Here, Johnson," he said, "what do you mean by driving a car off the track and then leaving it in the street?"

"Why," Johnson replied, suavely, "that's in the rules for drivers and conductors."

"In the rules for drivers and conductors?" roared the superintendent.

"Where, I'd like to know?" "Certainly," replied Johnson. "It says always to be polite to passengers. Do you remember the kind of a night last night was? Well, there was a lady on my car who didn't have an umbrella and she lived two blocks from that curve. So I drove her home."—Saturday Evening Post.

NOT ALTOGETHER A DEFEAT

Bride Had Made One Reservation She Intended to Live Up To.

A clergyman tells the following story: He was marrying a young couple. All went well until he reached that part of the service where the bride has to say, "I will love, honor and obey."

The first part of the sentence she would say all right, but on reaching the word "obey" she refused to say it, but made some kind of noise very like it.

The clergyman again repeated it, but she still refused to pronounce the word distinctly.

The parson now became rather vexed about this and informed the young lady that unless she said it correctly this time he would refuse to marry them.

The bride, rather crestfallen, again repeated the words, but on coming to the fatal word she again hesitated, but eventually pronounced it distinctly. As they were on the way to the vestry she whispered to the minister, "Well, I shan't shine his shoes."

"Is a fat man necessarily uncomfortable in warm weather?"

"He is if he listens to all the remarks his friends make about him."—Washington Star.

SENATOR PENROSE MUCH CHANGED BY REPUBLICAN LEADERSHIP

Former Rabid Standpatter And Aldrich's Lieutenant Has Been Changed For Better by Responsibilities of Senate Leadership—His Attitude Now Great Surprise to Country.

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 14.—At the time of Senator Aldrich's retirement from the Senate, Republican leaders were thrown into a state of confusion over the selection of a new leader. Many of the venerable members of the Senate shook their heads and said: "There is only one Aldrich in a generation." They expressed great fears that the Republican party had suffered an irreparable loss by his retirement.

The thing that gave them most concern was who was to succeed Aldrich as chairman of the Finance Committee. There were many who said that the President's pet measure, Canadian reciprocity, was doomed without Aldrich to guide its passage. President Taft had pledged himself to the passage of the measure, and failure to succeed in having it made a law meant a public acknowledgment of the weakness of the administration and defeat of the Republicans.

During the short interval between the close of the last session of Congress and the convening of the extra session called for the express purpose of passing the reciprocity pact, many "star chamber" conferences were held by the Republican leaders to determine upon the man who was to head the life or death struggle of the measure in the Senate.

With the announcement of Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, as successor to Aldrich as chairman of the finance committee and Republican whip, expressions of surprise and doubt as to his fitness were heard on all sides. Many declared reciprocity doomed.

All of this in no way intimidated Senator Penrose. He assumed the leadership of the fight with the same determination to win that has characterized him in every thing that he has undertaken. He realized the responsibility imposed upon him, and was prepared to stake all on the outcome. His political future depends upon the passage of the bill.

It is a new Penrose who is now chairman of the finance committee. True the leopard does not change his spots in a day, and it could not be expected that Penrose, boss of the Republican machine of Pennsylvania, would undergo a complete transformation in a few weeks. Still he is showing qualities of leadership as head of the finance committee that are worthy of his renowned predecessor. He has displayed many sterling qualities which even his closest friend did not give him credit for possessing.

Recently when Senator Bailey came near executing a plan to have the freelist and the wool bill voted upon in the Senate before reciprocity, and when Senator Penrose was about to give his consent to it, there was some disposition to make light of the Pennsylvania Senator, and say that the Senate needed an Aldrich back in its midst. But there are two sides to the question, and it is not improbable that if the plan had gone through, the session would have ended quite as expeditiously as it will end, and perhaps reciprocity would have been just as safe from amendment as it now is.

Few politicians who have been called upon to lead their party have been more roundly lambasted than Senator Penrose and yet his policy is a conservative one. He is much less czarlike than Senator Aldrich, who went down and out of the Senate without perceiving that the old-fashioned way of bludgeoning the Senate into doing things had passed.

Senator Penrose is a younger man. He has learned the lesson that the Senate can no longer be dictated to or ridden over by one man. History tells of the downfall of too many of the past rulers of the Senate for him to attempt to become dictator over it. He relies more on persuasion than upon compulsion.

Senator Penrose's policy is not to antagonize any element of the Republican party if he can possibly avoid it. He realizes that the party has been weakened by strife within its ranks, and if it is to hold its own there must be perfect harmony hereafter. In order to prevent the Democrats from sweeping it away in the 1912 election it will have to present a united front. During the past two years it has been rent in twain by internal dissensions and greatly weakened. Hence he is inclined to placate rather than stir up strife. He is attempting to hold back the Old Guard leaders who want to continue the methods of Aldrich, and is trying at the same time to smooth over the feeling of the insurgents and bring them into the field.

This is a strange role for a Senator who was generally supposed, back in the days of the Aldrich regime to be going about with a club looking for those Senators who were of the progressive order. However strange it may seem, Senator Penrose has adapted his personal feelings to suit his cause. He realizes along what lines he must work and is acting accordingly. A month from now when he has safely piloted reciprocity through the Senate, there will be many who will shake their heads and say they never thought it was in him.

The changes that time will make in a man are strange. Not long ago, a friend of Senator Penrose was startled to hear him speak in a complimentary way of Senator La Follette, the aggressive leader of the progressives. Senator La Follette was not the subject of the conversation. The friend merely alluded to the fighting Senator from Wisconsin, and Senator Penrose saw fit to pay La Follette a compliment. It has not been so long since Senator Penrose on the floor of the Senate harshly criticized Senator La Follette.

That Senator Penrose should come out as the champion of reciprocity and admit that the time has come for a general revision of the tariff, caused much comment around the Capitol. Few politicians a few years ago would have given any credit to a statement that Senator Penrose would aid in starting the Republican party to revising the tariff. There are many persons who would not believe Senator Penrose sincere in his desire to see the reciprocity pact passed. They claim that he is only doing it in hopes of staving off a Democratic victory in 1912. Failure on the part of the Republicans to pass the measure after the stand that President Taft has taken would mean certain defeat at the polls in the coming election. It is a death struggle with the Republican party.

Of course the action of Senator Penrose does not mean that he is getting ready to break away from the ranks of the regulars and become an insurgent. It does mean, however, that the Pennsylvania Senator has reached the conclusion that the leaders of the Old Guard must pursue a more liberal policy than they have in the past. The insurgents have gained an amount of strength that is alarming the regulars, and they are coming to the realization that if they hope to control the Senate, they must have progressive support. The times of the steam roller are past in the Senate, and it will be many days before a regime of the Aldrich type can again dominate the upper chamber.

Help for All

Andrew Carnegie once suggested as an epitaph for his own tombstone what he said was the secret of his success: "Here lies a man who surrounded himself with men abler than himself."

Many able people are working for you, scientists, inventors, manufacturers, all trying to make something you want. Do you use their brains and their efforts—"surround yourself with them"—or do you plod along by yourself, years behind the times?

Take your own home. Have you your share of modern improvements there—money-saving, labor-saving, health-promoting? One of the most important of these is a New Perfection Oil Cook-stove.

A New Perfection stove never overheats a kitchen. It saves your strength. It saves fuel and time. With the New Perfection oven with the glass doors you can go on with your ironing or any other work, and still be sure at a glance the joint is roasting properly.

SPINNERS LOST YESTERDAY TO THE PATRIOTS 5 TO 1

Walters Was on The Mound And Was Effective—Stuart The Hero.

"Tiny" Stuart gobbled up the lion's share of the honors in yesterday's game with Greenville, but there was enough left for Tony Walters, Lowman, Clapp and the others who contributed to the Patriots' victory. The score was five for Greensboro and one for the Spinners. "Big Liz" Cashion, alias the $2500 Beauty, was on the knoll for the visitors, but was clearly outclassed by Dr. Walters, whose work was of the gilded sort.

The Spinners got their first and only run in the first inning, when Sharp singled, was sacrificed to second and scored on Smith's single. In the second a man got to third but the rest of the game nobody on the Greenville team got further than second and only two that far.

Doyle was the first Greensboro player to score. He was safe on Sharp's error, after two men were out, stole second and scored on Fuller's two-bagger. In the third Clapp led off with a single, Lowman duffed, Clapp going to third, and Lowman to second on the play for Clapp. Corwin was given a pass, filling the bases. Then "Tiny" Stuart came up and sent one to the right field fence, clearing the bases and drawing up himself on the sack nearest home. The last run was scored in the sixth when Clapp got a free pass, was sacrificed to second and scored on Stuart's single.

The game was featured by Walters pitching, the catching of Stuart, and the batting of Stuart, Clapp and Lowman. Stuart got three hits for a total of five bases in three times at the bat. He scored four of the five men who crossed the rubber for Greensboro during the game.

DIAMOND DUST

Baseball here today at 4.30.

"Tiny" had the "clean-up" place yesterday.

Now, for a big crowd at this afternoon's game.

Winston moved down a peg yesterday, while we went up.

All that is necessary is to win one more a week than Winston does the rest of the season.

We are moving in the direction of top of the percentage column. Stand aside Winston and see the parade go by.

This afternoon should be time to add another to the Patriots string of victories. We don't know what Winston will do, but we know what we can do.

Monday the team will move down to Charlotte to try the Hornets a series of games. The last three days of next week Winston will be here. It will be seen that much depends upon the games next week in the solution of the pennant problem.

ANDERSON TAKES SECOND OF SERIES FROM THE TWINS

Anderson, S. C., July 14.—Three two-baggers, a single and a base on balls in the third inning of today's game off Stewart, gave the locals the victory 6 to 4. Hayes kept his hits well scattered except in the eighth when he allowed a double and a triple for one run. Owing to the threatening clouds and the low standing of local club only about 100 of faithful fans were present. The situation is considered alarming.

Spartanburg, July 14.—Charlotte won a tiresome game today 5 to 2. A. C. L. SAYS ASSESSMENTS ARE TOO HIGH

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, July 14.—George B. Elliott, assistant general counsel and C. J. Joseph, tax agent for the Atlantic Coast Line, were here today in conference with the Corporation Commission with reference to the tax assessment that the commission has made against the Coast Line, the railroad officials setting up the contention that the new assessment is too high. It is learned that the commission has about finished the assessment of railroad property, this being the regular quadrennial period for general reassessment of the physical property of the railroads and property generally throughout the state. Also it is learned that the railroad assessments show very material increase over the assessments in force for the past four years. However, the Corporation Commission has, they set out, been governed purely by the general showing of earnings and that the assessments are well within the bounds of reason. With the big advance in tax valuations in railroad and other corporate property and the general advances in valuations of real estate the state over that are being reported by the county tax assessors, there is every assurance that the state and the county governments will have all the revenue they can possibly need for the next two years and that the 1912 legislature will have an opportunity of materially reducing the tax rates, this reduction to extend to the county and the municipal governments. It is said that the school funds in many counties will show an especially big increase owing to the material rise in the tax rate that was made for schools by the recent legislators. In deed, it is said that some counties will have more school funds this year than they will know what to do with.

DUMPED SOME WHEAT

ON CHICAGO MARKET

Special to Telegram.

Chicago, July 14.—The Armour Packing interests today dumped 150,000 bushels of wheat on the Chicago market, precipitating nearly a panic. Before the close however the market regained its balance.

Pribiloff Islanders Wanted Baseball News.

San Francisco, July 14.—"What is the standing of the clubs of the National and American Leagues?" was the first question of inhabitants of the Pribiloff Islands when they gained close touch with the outside world for the first time through the new naval wireless station.

The United States supply ship Homer, which arrived from Alaska yesterday, brought word of the successful installation of the wireless station on St. Paul Island by the United States cruise Albatross. The islanders gathered to celebrate. When the naval operator turned up his instrument he said:

"I have Honolulu now. What do you fellows want?"

"All the baseball news you can get," the islanders answered.

After sending the club standing, the Honolulu operator attempted to send news of the coronation of King George.

"Ditch him," exclaimed one of the islanders.

"Ask him for Cobb's batting average and all about Eddie Collins, Home Run Wagner and Red Doolin. The coronation can wait."

Arrangements have been made to transmit to St. Paul Island daily news of the big leagues.
